1	The ability of a party to deselect all sitting MPs	Sep 10, 2009 8:07 PM
2	Decisive leadership not being bounced into knee jerk responses & headline grabbing policy changes. MP's should be well paid, and failure to recompense them properly only favours the idle rich who would quickly become the only people who could afford to enter parliament if Cam's policies were put into practice. The other things are important, but this should be in their own right - not in reaction to expenses scandal	Sep 10, 2009 8:10 PM
3	Political reform shouldn't be a priority, politician reform should be.	Sep 10, 2009 8:17 PM
4	Not a single one of the above listed would have anything to do with the expenses scandal!!!!!!!	Sep 10, 2009 8:48 PM
5	None of the choices are relevant	Sep 10, 2009 9:39 PM
6	Engagement with the electorate and a subsequent understanding of their fears and aspirations - especially our fatally dwindling core vote.	Sep 11, 2009 7:58 AM
7	independent body to deal with allowances/expenses. AND an elected HOL	Sep 11, 2009 8:20 AM
8	None of these reforms address why the expenses scandal occurred. All are valid reforms but it's disingenuous to bring them in "in the wake of the expenses scandal".	Sep 11, 2009 9:05 AM
9	More transparency. All expenses should be made public on an ongoing basis	Sep 11, 2009 10:30 AM
10	Average skilled wage in the areas the MPs represent.	Sep 11, 2009 6:11 PM
11	Removing the final hereditary peers and the Lords Spiritual	Sep 20, 2009 11:48 AM
12	Proper pay, set independently. Connecting the expenses scandal to XY and Z other reforms is IMO facile.	Sep 20, 2009 2:57 PM
13	changing expenses system and removing those that didn't follow spirit of the rules.	Sep 20, 2009 8:42 PM
14	Absolute transparency of all income and all political expenditure.	Sep 20, 2009 11:45 PM
